The body and cells are continuously identifying and destroying pathogens (viruses, bacteria, fungi, etc.) and build intricate molecular systems to improve immunity against these pathogens. The body's immune system seems to have the capability to identify the pathogen (amongst other identifying structures) by frequencies related to the physical genetic structure of the pathogen.

The MyBio Tracer uses the above mentioned mechanisms of the body's immune system to relay information on harmful pathogens back to the instrument in order to identify a particular pathogen.

The MyBio Tracer is therefore designed as a tool to identify diseases caused by harmful pathogens as well as a remedial tool to help fight off the harmful effects of such pathogens by destroying them or at least helping the body to combat such pathogens.

The MyBio Tracer is compatible with Windows operating system and consists of five distinct units:

- Basic PEMF device— for improving body cell functions and general health
- Tracer/scanner - to identify pathogen markers in the body
- Graphical selection tool - to mark/select the most outstanding pathogen markers found
- Pathogen database tool - to match these pathogen markers to known human pathogens that might be the cause of the clinical symptoms or relevant illness

- Complex electrical pulse generation tool - similar to the basic PEMF device with added functions controlled by the MyBio Tracer PC program.
